“ I tasted two vintages of the dry Moscatel de Alejandría, starting with the 2015 Mountain Blanco, from a very warm year when they started harvesting very early, during the first half of August. They consider it a very good year for the dry wine, and it rained at the end of the vintage, which complicated the sun drying of the grapes used for the sweet wines. It's varietal and minty, with a fresh palate and a finish with the classical bitter twist. It's quite original, as it shows freshness and doesn't overwhelm with the aromas, as they try to control the ripeness of the grapes.

About Wine Advocate

Robert Parker founded his bi-monthly newsletter, The Wine Advocate, in 1978. Since then he has come to be called "the most influential wine writer in the world today." In 2001 he launched eRobertParker.com. His team of Wine Advocates now comprehensively covers the world of fine wines in a way that no one person can any longer do. Parker continues to review the great wines of Bordeaux and Northern California and acts as a critic-at-large conducting vertical tastings and horizontal tastings of older vintages of California and elsewhere.
